The Environmental Photography Award 2024 is a prestigious global competition organized in collaboration with the Prince Albert II of Monaco Foundation, a prominent advocate for environmental conservation. Now in its fourth year, this annual contest serves as a remarkable platform for photographers worldwide to engage with urgent environmental issues. By participating in this competition, photographers can contribute to raising awareness about the intricate relationship between humanity and the natural world, highlighting the crucial connection between human health and the well-being of our planet.

Open to photographers of all nationalities, aged 18 or above by November 5th, 2023, this award invites creative individuals to explore five distinct categories: Polar Wonders, Ocean Worlds, Into the Forest, Humanity Versus Nature, and Change Makers: Reasons for Hope. Each participant has the opportunity to submit up to five images in each of the five categories, allowing for a maximum of 25 images. With a substantial prize fund of €11,000, the competition not only recognizes artistic excellence but also serves as a powerful catalyst for generating awareness and advocacy for environmental preservation.

Winners and selected entrants will enjoy global recognition through a high-quality photography book and extensive promotion on global press and social media platforms by the Prince Albert II of Monaco Foundation and its partners. Furthermore, the grand prize includes a 5,000 € grant and an exclusive invitation to explore the Amazon Research Station of the University of Ecuador, an unparalleled opportunity to document the heart of the Ecuadorian jungle. The award also features a public voting component and a Students' Choice category, ensuring a diverse and engaged audience that is inspired to take positive environmental action. Don't miss the opportunity to be part of this transformative event that harnesses the power of photography to inspire change and protect our planet's future.

The competition is free to enter.
