The European Design Awards (ED-Awards) stand as one of the most prestigious accolades in the realm of communication design across Europe. Held annually, the awards celebrate exceptional achievements in creative design, recognizing individuals and teams that set benchmarks in innovation, aesthetics, and functionality. Established to promote and honor the best in European design, the ED-Awards emphasize the vital role design plays in shaping modern culture, businesses, and technology. By bringing together an esteemed panel of design journalists and critics from across the continent, the awards ensure an impartial and expert evaluation process that distinguishes outstanding work.

The ED-Awards feature a diverse range of categories, encompassing areas such as branding, packaging, typography, editorial design, web design, and motion graphics, among others. This comprehensive approach allows the awards to highlight the multifaceted nature of design, showcasing its application across various industries and mediums. Each submission is rigorously evaluated for creativity, originality, and effectiveness, making the ED-Awards a gold standard for quality in European design. Additionally, the awards program places a strong emphasis on innovation, spotlighting projects that push boundaries and challenge conventional design norms.

Winning an ED-Award offers more than just recognition; it provides unparalleled opportunities for exposure and career advancement. Recipients gain visibility through publications in the ED-Awards catalogue, features on the official website, and widespread media coverage. Winners are celebrated during a prestigious award ceremony held in a different European city each year, offering a platform to connect with industry leaders and peers. With its commitment to elevating design excellence, the ED-Awards serve as a cornerstone of the European design community, fostering collaboration, inspiration, and growth for designers across the continent.

The entry fee for the European Design Awards 2025 starts at €169 per entry, with discounts for multiple entries and reduced fees for student projects.

ELIGIBILITY

Designers living or working within Europe may participate. Designers in Europe may submit work done for clients outside Europe. Designers who are not based within Europe may only submit work that was created for the European market.

PRIZE

The ED-Awards offer three levels of distinction: Gold, Silver, and Bronze. Gold winners receive a trophy during the award ceremony, while Silver and Bronze winners receive diplomas. All award winners and finalists are published in the ED-Awards catalogue and on the official website, providing significant exposure. Additionally, winners are invited to the ED-Awards ceremony, which is part of a festival held in a different European city each year, offering networking opportunities with leading designers and industry professionals.
