SOURCE: GRAPHIC COMPETITIONS

Organised by Blank Space, Fairy Tales invites architects, designers, writers, artists, engineers, illustrators, students and creatives to submit their own unique architectural fairy tales. A successful entry will craft a text narrative, along with 5 images, in the most spectacular way possible.

Over the last five years, the Fairy Tales competition has captured the imagination of thousands of participants from around the world. Today, the competition returns to inspire creatives and designers at a time when the world is struggling to distinguish fact from fiction. In a time like this, storytelling might be the most powerful tool to unlock universal truths and rediscover what matters.

« The best entries we have received over the years are not just visually stunning and original in their execution, but they inspire us by striking universal chords. From deeply personal studies in how we relate to our surroundings, to tales of large-scale social dystopias, the entrants to Fairy Tales competition have the power to ignite meaningful and needed conversations in the wider architecture community. » (Blank Space founder Francesca Giuliani)

Since its inception in 2013, the annual Fairy Tales challenge has attracted thousands of participants, and winners have gone on to develop their stories into successful Kickstarter campaigns, short films, comic books, and exhibitions.

Entry fee start at 60 USD.

ELIGIBILITY

Open worldwide to creatives of all backgrounds and ages.

PRIZE

• 1st Prize: 2500 USD • 2nd Prize: 1500 USD • 3rd Prize: 750 USD

Following the competition, Blank Space will publish the fourth volume of "Fairy Tales: When Architecture Tells A Story". Select entries will be included in the book, as well as featured prominently on the Blank Space's website.
