The Type Directors Club has announced Type Drives Communities, a two-day conference that will explore the ways in which people use typography to form and transform creative communities around the world.

To be held virtually May 7-8, the conference will feature illuminating talks, presentations, and group discussions spanning design disciplines and local and global communities. The event will highlight those that use typography to pursue a common purpose, establish intergenerational connections, and spark and sustain change.

With a diverse and growing line-up of more than twenty incredible speakers, Type Drives Communities promises to be an eye-opening experience.
