Contrary to popular belief, complex and grand logos aren't as effective as their simpler counterparts. This is because simple designs are easy to memorize and clear with the messaging.

Originality

When someone pays money for a logo design, then they want a product that's unlike anything else out there. So, it's ok to check out popular designs for inspiration but you should be careful not to repeat any of the design elements that you like in your own design. Besides, copying designs can also invite a copyright infringement case which is something you don't want.

Colors and Fonts

Clients may not exactly know what a logo's color says about a company, but they can get a general idea of the message that a design is sending across. So, be sure to pick the right colors for a brand i.e. colors that reflect appropriate emotions and attributes (excitement, energy, growth, etc.). You also need to pay attention to the fonts as they can have a huge impact on the logo and the brand.

Timelessness

A logo that's based on a current trend won't last for long. As soon as the trend is over, the logo may start to become irrelevant and unpopular. The best logos are timeless i.e. they look terrific even after 5 years from or 10 years from now or even 20 years from now. There are many good examples to consider for this principle including Nike, Pepsi, Sony, etc.

Scalability

Good logos are also scalable. In other words, they can be reduced to a small size or scaled to a large size and they will be legible either way. This feature is important because it allows entrepreneurs to put their logos on small objects like a pen or business card and big objects like bill-boards without ruining the design.
