The Passepartout Photo Prize, now in its 9th edition, is an international photography competition that seeks to identify and support emerging talent from across the globe. Organized by Il Varco, this competition is open-themed, welcoming photographers to submit works in any style or technique, ranging from traditional digital and film photography to more experimental approaches, including AI-generated images as part of the creative process. This flexibility allows for a broad range of artistic expression, making the Passepartout Photo Prize a unique platform for showcasing innovative and original approaches to contemporary photography.

The competition is structured to provide significant exposure and development opportunities for participating photographers. Winners not only receive cash awards but also gain the chance to exhibit their work in a prestigious gallery located in the heart of Rome. The exhibition is hosted at the 28 Piazza di Pietra Fine Art Gallery, an internationally recognized venue that blends modernity with the historical setting of the ancient Hadrian Temple ruins. This annual exhibition draws an international audience, including art collectors and enthusiasts, offering photographers unparalleled visibility and the chance to engage with a global art community.

Beyond the exhibition, the Passepartout Photo Prize offers additional benefits that further enhance the profile of the winning photographers. These include publication opportunities in the competition's annual catalogue and various partner magazines, as well as the chance to be featured in an online gallery and across social media platforms. The prize also includes a special sponsored award, the CSF Adams Prize, which provides a portfolio review and workshop, helping photographers refine their craft under expert guidance. This combination of awards and exposure makes the Passepartout Photo Prize a valuable opportunity for photographers looking to advance their careers and gain international recognition.
