The GLF Photography Awards 2026 is an international photography competition organised by the Global Landscapes Forum that highlights powerful visual storytelling around rangelands, landscapes and the people who depend on and care for them. The awards aim to spotlight the critical role that rangelands play in food systems, biodiversity conservation and climate resilience, while amplifying voices from communities often underrepresented in global environmental conversations. Through compelling photography, the competition encourages audiences to see rangelands not as marginal spaces, but as living landscapes central to sustainable development.

Open to photographers from around the world, the GLF Photography Awards 2026 welcomes both professionals and passionate amateurs who use photography as a tool for storytelling and advocacy. Submissions are expected to capture authentic moments that reflect human–nature relationships, land stewardship, traditional knowledge and the everyday realities of life in rangeland regions. By combining artistic excellence with social and environmental relevance, the awards seek images that inform, inspire and provoke dialogue among policymakers, practitioners and the wider public.

Selected photographs are showcased through Global Landscapes Forum platforms, including exhibitions, online features and public voting campaigns, significantly increasing the visibility of winning and shortlisted photographers. The competition culminates in a high-profile presentation at GLF Africa 2026, where the images contribute to broader discussions on land restoration, climate action and sustainable livelihoods. In doing so, the GLF Photography Awards 2026 positions photography as a powerful medium for change, connecting visual storytelling with global environmental impact.

There is no entry fee.
