Visualising Corruption Infographic Competition

Category: Graphic Design
Deadline: November 11, 2013
Website: graphiccompetitions.com

Hate corruption? Love design? Transparency International is launching an infographic competition on the topic of corruption in the UK.

We are particularly interested in infographics because the issue of corruption, while devastating and far reaching in its effects globally, can be hard to visualise. As the UK chapter of Transparency International, we are particularly keen to communicate this better to the British public.

We want visualisations that will make people think or inspire a debate about the issue in the UK and the UK's role in corruption and anti-corruption overseas. We'd love to see you use design to tell a visual story which will communicate these ideas to a variety of audiences.

There is no entry fee.

Eligibility
Anyone worldwide is eligible to enter this competition.

Prize
As well as being featured on the Transparency International UK website and promoted via social media, the winning entries will also receive:

• First Place: £300 (approx. 480 USD)
• Second Place: £200
• Third Place: £100

The prizes will be awarded at Transparency International UK's Annual Anti-Corruption Lecture on 11th December 2013.
